RELIGION AS A STAYER

REV. E. E. NEWBURN SEES IMPROVEMENT, BUT NO DECADENCE.

Many argue that Religion as a Stayer is but a refined form of Superstition. What It Really Is.

At All Souls' Unitarian Church yesterday Rev. E. E. Newburn had for his theme "Faith, Hope and Love." He said in part: "How common place these words are, yet how poor would language be without them. Man has done much. He has fought necessary battles, built empires and cities, discovered new worlds, and taken giant material strides. But he has done something more than all this, else he has not achieved. It is the dream of the poet, the call of the prophet, the note of the singer, that tells of abiding human progress and lifts us out of the dusty rut of work. Not all the Caesars did a work in empire building which, in its influence upon the world, rises to the high level of the apostle Paul. Before all things else stands man's thought of God, his hope of a good to be and his love of the world around him. His thought of God may not be rational, yet it touches his life with a little of the universal. His hope, too, may be made of the stuff that dreams are made of, yet when it becomes his anchor and when it is his inspiration, and our love may be imperfect, but without it this world would be a sorry place for man, and life would be a difficult proposition. It is a fair picture of this man opening his life to the universal. It is impossible to name the value of a moral action. I like the man who plunges in without asking. Give me the man with heart, who believes in the good and true, even though it fill his eyes and he now and then is blinded to the vision. Give me the man who is sometimes led by his emotions, who does not carefully compute the cost, who catches the spirit of a song and sings, who hears the drums beat and goes marching to the wars, who prays, who is touched by night, and by day is touched with earth strains who is thrilled by something, has a touch of pathos in his nature, who laughs and cries aloud, and is awed or made ashamed by the mighty and regenerating moral process of life.

RELIGION HAS ITS PLACE.

"Within this region of inspiration, this region of heart and soul, this region of faith and hope, warmth and color, religion has its place. For religion is like unto life, and the cardinal principles of life are as well the eternal forces in religion. But as yet the larger half of the world does not believe this. Simply religion, make it plain and sweet and inspiring and true and real, a nearby thing for daily use, and you will destroy the features which many people care for. It still holds in the public mind, that to be religious one must be a little like one's neighbor, whose life is worldly, or one must do something that he dislikes to do or believe something that he does not believe, or at least live in a way that is uncomfortable. It is objected that faith and hope and love are too simple to constitute religion, who more needed to round out a human life? Believe that you will, call God by what name you will, read your Bible with a microscope or a telescope, say your prayers in church or in a street, unless your faith makes you faithful, unless your love makes you loving, unless your hope have not crossed the boundary into religion's sphere, you may be a Christian, in a formal sense, yet have no religion.

"Much is being said about the decadence of religion. The question is asked, will religion endure, will it place in the busy, active world 100 years hence? The question is, will belief change during the century? I answer, yes. If the question is, will the church and the progress of the world become simpler, will worship be more casual and willing? I answer, yes. But if the question is, shall religion be done away or be superseded by education or by the world's sentiments, it is argued that religion at its best is a refined form of superstition, and that we are trying to rationalize a way to repeat the form of religion, and that many superstitions have come and gone, but religion is the truest, it is not dead, it is not a formula, it is not bad logic, it is not ignorant superstition. Religion is just human life at its highest value, it is just human life lived in view of life's sacred possibilities, it is just human life taking on the universal religion shall endure for human life, with all its higher needs, its dreams, its soul and its quick response to the human touch, shall continue.

THREE PICKETS

MOLDERS' UNION SECURES ARREST OF JOHN DUNBRASKY.

Charge Made Against One of the Foremen at the Indianapolis Foundry Company's Plant.

STRIKE WILL BE CONTINUED

NONUNION MEN EMPLOYED ARE HOUSED IN THE FOUNDRY.

Butchers' Union Holds Another Secret Meeting to Consider Its Grievances—Strike Not Probable.

The strike of the iron molders at the Indianapolis Foundry Company is lengthening into a long and bitter struggle. The molders walked out more than a month ago, asking that their men be not discriminated against by the foreman of the plant and that their union be recognized. Since that time the fight has been carried on. The molders have kept pickets about the foundry continually, and several unsuccessful conferences have been held by George Gunnery and the employers.

The foundry is now employing about thirty or forty nonunion men, most of whom are Hungarians brought from Haughville. The pickets of the iron molders say that the Hungarians live in the foundry bunks having been erected, and meals are served to the men by the employers. George Gunnery, business agent of the molders, says that he is going to have the Health Board investigate the sanitary conditions that prevail in the plant, as the men sleep in the bunks where they work.

At the instigation of several of the pickets yesterday the police arrested John Dunbrasky, one of the foremen of the plant, on the charge of drawing weapons on one of the molders. Dunbrasky was bringing a number of Hungarians over from Haughville, it is said, and when he arrived at the common north of the plant one of the pickets stepped up and drew a revolver. Dunbrasky drew two revolvers from his pockets and told the picket to keep away or he would shoot him. The molders claim that it is unnecessary for the employers to keep the men housed in the factory. Their plan is to stop the work, and the company may attempt to employ. George Gunnery stated that they intended to hold out against the employers until their demands were granted and they secured the proper recognition of their union. About 140 iron molders are affected by the strike.

BUTCHERS MEET IN SECRET.

Business Agent Still Maintains That There Will Be No Strike.

Another meeting of the Butchers' Union was held yesterday afternoon in the Red Men's Hall, on Washington street, to further discuss the condition of the meat cutters and the packing houses of King & Co. The meeting was well attended, and the interests of the men were thoroughly entered into. However, it was stated at the close of the meeting that no decision action was taken, nor would any be taken until the international officers of the association are heard from. James Sullivan, business agent of the butchers' local union of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workers of North America, said last night: "A meeting was held this afternoon, but no action was taken, and everything remains as it has been. We anticipate no trouble in settling our difference, and will not act until we communicate with our international officers at Syracuse, N. Y. Our affairs were discussed at length at the meeting, but the outcome of it amounted to nothing."

SKULL AND CROSSBONES

THE INSIGNIA OF THE THETA NU EPSILON FRATERNITY.

Nine Young Men Initiated Under a Bridge North of Irvington—Skeletons and Red Fire.

Under a high bridge that spans Pleasant run, just north of Irvington, and around which a ghost is said to have its haunt, nine young men gathered several nights ago and in the presence of a bleached skeleton and whose fleshless grin and uncanny bones made more ghastly by a light of red fire, were given the oath of allegiance of the Theta Nu Epsilon fraternity. The young men are prominent students at Butler College, and it is understood have been working for several years to secure a charter from the T. N. E. fraternity, which is an interfraternal society, the members being selected from the sophomore classes. The oath was administered by alumni of the fraternity, who were instrumental in securing the charter. One by one, the young men stepped forward and taking the oath, bent their heads toward the skeleton and raised the other towards heaven. The exact date of the installation of the chapter is not known, as the greatest secrecy has been maintained in regard to the new chapter. The Theta Nu Epsilon is one of the best-known fraternities in the country, for its members are taken from all fraternities and are picked with the greatest care. The new chapter at Butler, it is understood, is the best known in Indiana. Delta. The chapter roll includes Paul R. Davis, Mark Brown, Leslie Anthony, George Davis, of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity; Harold Maury, Frank Long, John Mitchell, Jr., Walter Jones, of the Sigma Chi fraternity, and Frank Sumner of a Southern fraternity.

WOMAN DREW A CROWD.

Annie Schwab's Intoxication the Cause of Many Rumors.

Annie Schwab, living any place about the city where her loafing was being tolerated, and a noted police character, having been arrested for loitering and drunkenness more times than any other female in the city, was found at the corner of West and Washington streets yesterday afternoon in a state of intoxication, which at first looked very dangerous. She was removed to the City Dispensary in a supposedly dying condition. It was just in the middle of the afternoon and crowds of people were going along Washington street, seeing the police carrying the prostrate form of the girl into the dispensary, a mob soon formed outside the door. From one group she had been murdered and from another she had committed suicide, and forty different reasons could be learned from the crowd as to the cause of her condition. She lay as if lifeless for several hours on the operating table, but finally rallied and was arrested on the charge of being drunk.

N. W. REYNOLDS ARRESTED

AN OLD SOLDIER LIVING NEAR OAKLAND BROUGHT TO CITY.

Several Worthless Checks for Small Amounts Bearing His Signature Circulated in Indianapolis.

N. W. Reynolds, an old soldier living at Oakland, Ind., was arrested yesterday at his home and brought to this city, charged with false pretenses. A large number of worthless checks of small amounts have been circulated around the city in the past few months and all were signed by N. W. Reynolds, of Oakland. Detectives Harry H. Reynolds and James M. Reynolds, who were sent to Oakland yesterday afternoon and succeeded with very little trouble in locating him. Reynolds acknowledged giving the checks and said that some money that had been due him some time ago was to have been paid in the bank and he had supposed it had been paid there to his credit. Mr. Reynolds says that he is at present engaged in writing a book on the civil war, which, after two years of hard labor, is nearly completed. Mr. Reynolds cashed a check for $5 at the Star Store and one for $25 at Goldberger's clothing store, both in Massachusetts avenue, last week and he gave so many references that his check at both places was considered at the time absolutely good.

GAS CONSUMERS' LEAGUE

COMMITTEES WILL MEET TO-DAY AT COMMERCIAL CLUB.

Organization Is Rapidly Getting Into Shape to Fight for Preservation of Trust Company.

The executive and legal committees of the Gas Consumers' League will meet at the Commercial Club this afternoon at 1 o'clock. The finance committee will meet to-morrow at noon, and a meeting of the general committee has been called for Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock. The league is rapidly getting into shape for a fight to save the Consumers' Gas Trust Company.

Frank W. Olin, who was named Saturday as chairman of the league, appointed the following to serve as members: Frank S. Fishback, 413 South Pennsylvania street; Lewis Hoover, secretary of Commercial Club; Charles A. McConnell, 515 Majestic building; William H. Elvin, 121 South Meridian street; Armin Bohn, The Metzger Agency; Carl R. Rost, 15 North Illinois street; Crutcher D. Bowen, 72 Stevenson building; John L. Clough, Badger Furniture Company; Lewis A. Coleman, 1006 Stevenson building. A general canvass for members is desired that citizens who are in sympathy with the movement will call upon the members of the league and demand their names. Blanks will be mailed on telephoner to any member of the league, or to Charles E. Merrifield, secretary of the league, at 424 Levee building. The "Gas Consumers' League" contains over five hundred names secured without a canvass.

CINCINNATI'S NEW HOTEL

Henry W. Lawrence Will Confer with the Promoters This Week.

Henry W. Lawrence, manager of the Claypool Hotel, will go to Cincinnati to-day or to-morrow to meet the promoters of the city who are undertaking the organization of a company to erect and conduct a $2,000,000 hotel. Mr. Lawrence said last evening that so far as the formation of the company is concerned the project is well under way, but that some difficulty is being experienced in securing a site. "The men who are interested will not spend $2,000,000 unless they know they have a most advantageous site," said Mr. Lawrence. "It was thought that the site where the Pike Theater now stands could be secured, but it was found that the title was in the hands of the city, and the promoters are forced to look elsewhere. Another site may be determined upon this week. If the new hotel, if erected, will be conducted strictly on the European plan, says Mr. Lawrence.

SHOT INTENDED FOR RABBIT.

Fred Ayres, of Irvington, Accidentally Shot on Hunting Trip.

While hunting, Saturday afternoon, Fred Ayres, living at 5600 University street, Irvington, accidentally shot himself in the shoulder. Ayres, accompanied by Zink Love, also of Irvington, started out Saturday morning to hunt rabbits. When they prepared to return home, Ayres placed his gun under the seat of the buggy. Love handed him his gun, also, and in putting it under the seat the weapon was accidentally discharged and struck Ayres in his right shoulder and ran down the back of his neck. The accident occurred about half a mile north of the city on the National road. Ayres was driven rapidly to the office of Dr. Towles, in Irvington, where his wound was dressed. An effort was made to find the bullet, which had lodged in the tissues of the neck. It could not be found. Ayres is not in a serious condition.

REVAL OF FENCING

GEN. M'KEE AND NATIONAL GUARD OFFICERS INTERESTED.

Nestor Le Maire, Master of the Foils, Will Establish School of Fence This Winter.

FRENCH SOLDIER AND DUELIST

HE BELIEVES FENCING FINEST EXERCISE IN THE WORLD.

Boxing Is Looked Upon with Scorn by Him, His Experience Having Been Rather Discouraging.

There is to be a revival of interest in the noble art of fencing, this winter, in Indianapolis. Gen. W. J. McKee, commander of the Indiana National Guard, a skillful fencer himself, and an enthusiast on the subject, will interest his young officers, partially on the theory that every officer should know how to handle a sword as well as wear one.

Nestor Le Maire, a manufacturer of carpets, at 211 East Minnesota street, is one of the most expert fencing masters in the United States. M. Le Maire will organize classes as soon as possible this winter. He is now looking for a suitable room near the center of the city where his prospective pupils may exercise. Saturday he discussed his plans with General McKee, at the home of the latter, and in the dancing room the former French soldier and the Indiana soldier had a spirited bout with the foils.

Of late years M. Le Maire has been too busy weaving carpets to devote much time to the foils, but he believes that there is now enough interest in fencing in Indianapolis to warrant the organization of classes. General McKee has promised his co-operation. The general will endeavor to make his interest among the officers of the guard in this city.

Nine years ago M. Le Maire conducted a class in fencing. At that time General McKee invited a number of his officers to meet twice a week at his house to receive instruction from the little Frenchman. The clash of swords and the stamp, stamp, stamp of nervous feet were often heard at that time in General McKee's house. Le Maire and the general frequently had exciting passages at arms.

AN OLD SOLDIER. Nestor Le Maire is a short, lithe man, with a curling dark mustache, a bright, sharp eye that watches an opponent as a cat does a bird. He was formerly a maitre d'arms in the Belgian army, and has fought his duels and carried his "honorable scars." He was born near Sedan. His playground was the wonderful fortress of Sedan. Le Maire was back in sight of the old fortress again when the French army surrendered to the Prussians. Le Maire was fifteen years old when he entered the army of Belgium as a volunteer. "It was a hard work to climb up from the ranks," he said, "but with quick hand and a sharp eye, one can do anything."

He tells of his rise to corporal, to second sergeant, first sergeant, sergeant major, and then lieutenant of ordnance and maitre d'arms of the regiment. "I teach the officers how to use their swords," he said, "and though I was only a lieutenant of ordnance I could take the swords away from them when I pleased."

Le Maire is excessively polite and wonderfully reticent. He will hardly talk about himself. He has seen many of the Frenchmen of note, and the name of Boulanger is usually mentioned, sent him off on the subject of dueling. "Boulanger! Ah—he could fight too. In ze leetle of ze house, I remember ze exact place it was. They fought in ze—what you call ze suburbs of Paris. Ze men were dressed in blue, and ze second was a mon Dieu, that Boulanger he open himself. He point ze elbow wrong, and Floquet he stood. I tried him once. I put on ze gloves and stood in front of ze man. He moved his hands up and down, sideways, this way, that way. By and by I see what he was fencing, we call an opening, and I step forward and try to get in. He said, 'Heave ho what you call one upstart, and I was finished for ze night. Boxing is no good.'"

"DEFEND THE REPUBLIC"

PATRIOTIC ADVICE GIVEN TO GERMAN BY MR. FALBISANER.

At German House He Delivers Scholarly Lecture on "German Settlements of North America."

The discussion of "German Settlements of North America in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries," by Adolf Falbisaner, in the auditorium at the German house yesterday morning at 11 o'clock, drew a large audience of German citizens of this city. Mr. Falbisaner is a teacher of the German school of the Social Turners. He has made a special study of the German movement in this country from the earliest date. His lecture yesterday was delivered entirely in German. He dealt with the most interesting data concerning the earliest German settlements in the United States, from the founding of Germantown, Pa., in 1683 by Franz Pastorius, who was a close friend of the Quaker leader, William Penn. From the beginning, Mr. Falbisaner said, the Germans made an active protest against the slave trade that was growing rapidly in America. He dwelt especially on the part taken by Germans in the revolutionary war. He next took up the different German colonies and settlements, speaking at length of the Rappahannock colony in Indiana, around which the settlement of the German nobility in New Braunfels, Tex. His descriptions of these scenes and movements were very accurate. He likewise delivered some very warm words about the Turner settlements in New Urm, Minn., of which one of the founders was Jacob Mix, father of Prof. Robert Mix, superintendent of German in the public schools of this city. The German Society in 1834, under Frederick Muech and Paul Fellenius, and discussed briefly the history of the German movement in this country. Reference was also made to the founding of Hermann, Mo., by the German Settlers from the Fatherland, in 1838, and the settlement of the unscrupulous Bishop Stephen.

The latter part of the lecture was devoted to the importance of German influence in American history. In closing he said that the German people were the right side and exhorted his audience to defend the Republic and the new nation.

Adolph Falbisaner has given a great deal of time to the study of this subject. He is a corresponding member of the Missouri Historical Society, having been appointed in recognition of his research work. He has contributed to the American Germania, which is edited by Prof. M. D. Learned, at the University of Pennsylvania, and to other leading historical journals.

NEW BUILDING DEDICATED

INTERESTING SERVICES AT RE-MODELED Y. M. C. A. HOME.

Addresses by Rev. Worth M. Tippy and Elijah P. Brown—View of the Building.

The newly remodeled building of the Young Men's Christian Association, 33 North Illinois street, was dedicated yesterday afternoon before a large audience which assembled in the new auditorium on the second floor. The exercises were presided over by James M. Ogden, who is a very prominent member of the association. The exercises opened with a vocal selection by Miss Mabel Winter, who sang "The Brighter Day." The Rev. Worth M. Tippy, pastor of the Broadway M. E. Church, in addressing the audience, said that it is the custom of people everywhere to organize themselves into clubs; the street boys have their club or gang and the rich people have their fine club. "We have," said he, "a number of such clubs in this city, but the one that is probably the best equipped of them all is the Y. M. C. A. It is pre-eminent for its usefulness and it is a club that we can't do without."

The Rev. Tippy was followed by Elijah P. Brown, of this city, editor of the Ram's Horn, who spoke on the topic, "Hitch Your Wagon to a Star." Mr. Brown said: "Before you will be able to hitch your wagon to a star and succeed it is necessary for you to have some aim, some real purpose in life. The Young Men's Christian Association may well be called the Young Men's Character Adjusting Factory, for its object is to help God make a man by helping the man to find his real aim in life, and when that is done the association helps him to hitch his wagon to a star. There is only one way for a man to succeed in this world and that is by getting on the right track. If he once gets himself on the right track and holds himself there he will be successful."

At the close of the exercises the audience went through the building upon the invitation of C. H. Badger, president of the association.
